

Lord Rothschild, Balfour Letter Recipient, Dead

Jewish Telegraphic Agency
LONDON—Lionel Walter Rothschild, second Baron Rothschild, died last week at his country seat, Tring Park, in Hertfordshire, after a long illness. He was sixty-nine years old.

Baron Rothschild never married. His successor in the oldest title of English nobility held by a Jewish family is his nephew, Nathaniel Mayer Victor Rothschild.

The late baron was the titular head of the English branch of the powerful Rothschild banking family, whose importance dates from the early eighteenth century. As a young man he was active in British politics, holding a seat in the House of Commons for eleven years, but in 1910 he retired from Parliament in favor of his cousin Lionel, who held the same seat, that of Aylesbury in Buckinghamshire, until 1923.

Headed English Zionists.

Despite his pre-occupation in later years with scientific matters, Baron Rothschild's name is linked with one political event of major importance, which was causing international repercussions even at the time of his death. It was to him, as president of the English Zionist Federation, that the late Lord Balfour, then British Minister of Foreign Affairs, on November 2, 1917, addressed a letter guaranteeing establishments of a Jewish national home in Palestine, the document known to the world as the "Balfour Declaration."

For thirty years, nevertheless, Baron Rothschild's foremost interest was in the field of natural history. He maintained a museum at Tring Park which achieved international fame, including hundreds of thousands of specimens of birds and butterflies, many of utmost rarity.

As time went on he turned chiefly to collection of wild animals, sending expeditions all over the globe to secure additions to his museum.

Father Made Peer

Baron Rothschild was born in London, February 8, 1868. His father who, unlike him, was the active head of the vast interests of the House of Rothschild, was elevated to the peerage in 1885, an event taken as signaling the complete emancipation of the Jews of England from racial and religious restrictions.

The second baron was educated at Magdalene College, Cambridge University, and at the University of Bonn, Germany. He was author of numerous treatises on biology. Besides his English peerage, he was a baron of the former Austrian Empire.

Talmud Is Defended Against Nazi Charge

Jewish Telegraphic Agency
LONDON—The Talmud was warmly defended this week by Herbert Danby, Regius professor of Hebrew at Oxford University, against "immorality" accusations by Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, German Nazi leader.

Professor Danby, in a new pamphlet issued by the Friends of Europe, declared Dr. Rosenberg had given a false impression of the ancient compilation of Jewish law, history and legend by misquoting, using quotations torn from their context and selecting items which might offend present-day sensibilities.

The New Year Is Called

Rosh Hashonah, the traditional YOM T' RUAH—Day of the blowing of the Shofar, finds its spirit depicted in the study of the patriarch with the ram's horn above. It is a reproduction of a bronze plaque by Boris Schatz, illustrious Jewish artist, and is from the collection of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

112 German Children Leave For Palestine

Special
NEW YORK—One hundred and twelve Jewish children are enroute from Germany to Palestine, the first group of youths to immigrate to the latter country since last January, according to a cablegram received by Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization of America.

The boys and girls, ranging in ages from 15 to 17, will be settled in agricultural colonies and trade centers of Palestine by the Youth Aliyah committee, of which Hadassah is the American agency. The group on the way to Palestine will increase the number of German youth settlers in that country to more than 1700, it was said at the Hadassah headquarters.

New Jewish Hospital To Open In Palestine

Jewish Telegraphic Agency
NEW YORK—The stethoscope and scalpel may help to accomplish what guns and airplanes have failed to do—bring peace to troubled Palestine. Dr. Nathan Ratnoff, chairman of the American Jewish Physicians' Committee, indicated Tuesday as he returned aboard the Ile de France from a trip to the Holy Land.

Dr. Ratnoff announced that the new 250-bed Hadassah-Rothschild-University Hospital and Medical School at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem would open in September. The new hospital-medical school unit, sponsored by Hadassah and the American Jewish Physicians' Committee, has been in the planning since fifteen years ago, when the Committee bought the land. The committee was established in 1921 as a result of a trip to the United States by Professor Albert Einstein in behalf of the university.

"The unit is the last word in modern hospital and clinical construction and equipment," Dr. Ratnoff said. "It will serve all alike, regardless of race or creed."

"Medicine is a great peace-maker. The Jewish people in Palestine are going to show the world what tolerance means. The hospital and medical college will help them to do it."

Also aboard the Ile de France were George Backer, president of the Jewish Telegraphic Agency, and Mrs. Backer, returning from a brief trip.

5000 Jews In China Suffer In Fighting

Jewish Telegraphic Agency
SHANGHAI—With 5000 Jews seriously affected by the fierce Japanese-Chinese fighting that is rapidly reducing Shanghai and other parts of China to a shambles, Shanghai rabbis this week sent out an urgent appeal for aid in extending relief. 500 were reported absolutely destitute in Shanghai and 200 in Hongkong. (Apparently those in Hongkong have been evacuated from the zone of combat. There has been no fighting in Hongkong, which is a "protectorate" of England.—Editor).

Many Jewish shops and homes have been destroyed by shells and fire in the heavy Shanghai fighting. A special Jewish volunteer regiment has been patrolling the Jewish quarter, extinguishing fires, protecting property and evacuating Jews from the danger zone.

Mercenaries Threaten

Jewish Telegraphic Agency
TIENTSIN—Anti-Jewish excesses by "White" Russian mercenaries in the Japanese-Chinese war were prevented this week by Jewish volunteers who undertook the task of patrolling the Jewish districts.

Chief Rabbi Of Britain Tells Of Meeting Rumanian Prelate

Jewish Telegraphic Agency
LONDON—The anti-Semitic outburst in Bucharest last week of Patriarch Miron Cristea, chief prelate of the Greek Orthodox Church in Rumania, led Dr. J. H. Hertz, Chief Rabbi of Britain, to recall this week the time the Patriarch denied anti-Semitic prejudice and protested that some of his best friends were Jews.

"I read with amazement the barbarous outburst of the Patriarch," Dr. Hertz said in a statement to the Jewish Telegraphic Agency. "I am only concerned at the present with the statement that he expressed himself in exactly the same words to a delegation of British Jews while in London. That is not true."

"The deputation consisted of Leonard Montefiore (president of the Anglo-Jewish Association) and myself. The Patriarch denied anti-Semitic prejudice and asked kindly concerning Dr. (Moses) Gaster

SAY PEACE TALKS BEING ARRANGED

Jewish Telegraphic Agency

LONDON—Arab public opinion might be turned in favor of establishment of a Jewish State in Palestine under certain conditions, according to a dispatch to The Times of London from Paris reporting efforts to convene a Jewish-Arab round-table.

While partition of the Holy Land as recommended by the Royal Commission is not acceptable to the Arabs, the Times dispatch said, it might become much more palatable if the proposed Jewish State entered a federal union with the Arab State.

A statement by Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the World Zionist Organization, interpreted as favoring an Arab federation produced a favorable impression in Arab circles, the Times said.

The move for a round-table, the Times, said, is being fostered by the Committee for the Defense of the Rights of Israelites of Central and Eastern Europe, which is seeking to bring together qualified representatives of the Palestine Arabs and Jews.

The committee believes, the Times reported, that Arab circles will agree to such a meeting on condition that the Jewish delegates are invited personally and not as representatives of the Jewish Agency.

This reservation is made because the Arabs have never recognized the Balfour Declaration and the mandate under which the Agency was established.

Agudath Israel Hits Partition

Jewish Telegraphic Agency

MARIENBAD, Czechoslovakia—The congress of the Agudath Israel, orthodox Jewish organization, unanimously adopted a resolution this week rejecting proposals for establishment of a Jewish State through the partition of Palestine.

The proper fulfillment of the League of Nations mandate for the Holy Land would bring about peace between Arabs and Jews, the resolution says. The congress instructed its executive committee to negotiate with the British Government for a solution of the Palestine question "answering the spiritual and material needs of the Jewish people."

Declaring Jewish rights in Palestine were based on the Torah the congress protested against restrictions on Jewish immigration and land-purchase in the Holy Land.

Many Injured In New Polish Disturbances

Jewish Telegraphic Agency

WARSAW—Widespread anti-Jewish disorders in which many were injured and considerable property damage done were reported this week.

Socialists and trade unions called a half-day general strike, averting further excesses by anti-Semites. Jews fled several towns in Lomza.

Times Denies Britain Aided Peace.

Jewish Telegraphic Agency

NEW YORK—The Mandates Commission is not convincing when it seeks to show that the Mandatory Power "for nearly twenty years sought to appease the antagonistic feelings prevailing in Palestine," the New York Times said in an editorial.

"There is little evidence in the official records and less in the testimony of Jews and Arabs on the spot that British administrators have made more than casual efforts to bring the two groups together," the Times declares. "On the contrary, throughout the years moderates on both sides have sought vainly for active British support of their plans to effect a Jewish-Arab rapprochement."

Quoting the summary's statement that the success of the partition plan depends more on its effects on the relations between the Arabs and Jews than on the territorial solution adopted, the Times says:

"There is the crux of the matter. The test of any program proposed for Palestine is the measure in which it may be expected to advance real understanding between Jews and Arabs."

Jews Pledge Blood For Soil.

Jewish Telegraphic Agency

JERUSALEM—Thousands of Jews vowed last week not to give up a "single step of Palestine soil sanctified by Jewish blood" as a tombstone was unveiled in memory of Ephraim Czizik, who died defending the Hulda colony against Arab attack in 1929.

The Editor's Chair:

During the past year I have made many errors. Often I have attempted to substitute The Editor's Chair for the Throne of Heaven, and instead of speaking as the editor of an Anglo-Jewish newspaper have denounced like a God. And if there is one decision that has really worried me it is in connection with this attitude. Shall I observe and comment calmly or shall I hit out right and left, attack, excoriate and engulf those with whom I disagree in a vehement blast of fiery words?

For some reason there seems to be no middle ground. A dispassionate editorial arouses no one, does not even make good reading. A fighting editorial causes people to rub their eyes, to sit up and take notice.

For instance, on Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur, many Jewish stores will keep open, in open shame to their owners and other Jews. Would you as an editor print a list of these stores and write a diatribe against them? Or would you just point out that Jewish stores should close on these Holy Days?

Now, no rabbi, if he wants to hold his job, would attempt to call out from the pulpit the names of these shameless Jews. Jeremiah or Micah would.

I notice however, with the passing of the years, that my editorials become less fighting and more reserved, although many readers may disagree on this point. In answer to charges made by this paper, some defendants inquire by what right I assume to tell people what to do. Of course this is no answer to any charge, but in truth I have man- or God-given right to criticize anyone or anything.

It is a problem. And I hope that in the coming year this Chair will change less often into a throne and its occupant be less often fooled into thinking that only he and God can be right.

3 Arabs Killed In Palestine Disorders

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
JERUSALEM — War threatened Palestine this week.

Three Arabs were reported killed as British military authorities conferred to avert a threatened outbreak of Arabs similar to the 1936 excesses which took scores of lives and caused millions in property damage.

The situation was believed grave.

A Happy New Year

THE management and staff of this paper wishes you a Happy New Year.

There is always a touch of irony in saying "Happy New Year." One might perhaps say with as much logic "the sun will rise in the West this year". For reason, history and life teach us that even if we agree on a definition for happiness, the chances of any individual finding it are not very large. Reason, history and life teach us that we will probably all continue a somewhat meaningless existence in a world of oppression, of injustice, of futility.

The chances are that 5698 will be just another year in which man will speak grandiloquently of the brotherhood of man through God, while man's inhumanity to man flourishes as it has through the ages—a year in which we hear a symphony of beautiful, empty phrases, and see every decent instinct of man sacrificed on the altar of greed and ignorance and fear and hate.

Still, 5698 may be different. Therein is the thought and the hope that has nurtured human existence along to our present veneer of civilization. This year things will be different, this year we will live in a world made miraculously happy by the change in the calendar.

Some day the truths of the Torah will prevail. May it be this year and the call of the Shofar at the dawn of 5698 usher in all the good things of life for our friends.

Two Jewish Women Die

LAST week two Jewish women died in an automobile accident in Florida.

Their deaths, in a Jewish world where Jewish judges and national organization officials receive only regular notices in the Anglo-Jewish press, occasioned no comment in newspapers anywhere except in Indianapolis, former home of the accident victims.

But in Miami, Fla., where the two women, mother and daughter, had resided for the past fourteen years, a whole community was thrown into mourning. Eight hundred people jammed Beth David Talmud Torah Hall to hear the funeral oration from Rabbi Max Shapiro. Attending the sorrowful services was every rabbi in Miami. The death of Mrs. Freda Markowitz and her mother, Mrs. Dora Cohen, had shocked the Jewish community of a whole state. Active and honorary pallbearers included the names of Miami's most influential Jewish citizens.

And among the many Miami organizations which passed resolutions of condolence was the Harvey Seeds Post of the American Legion.

Doing their work humbly, as has been the hallmark of the work of Jewish women throughout the ages, these two women almost unnoted anywhere except in their home community have passed away from this earth. Other Jewish women, with the same high standing in their localities, have performed their earthly tasks unattended by publicity, and then died with only a small stir on the national Jewish scenes.

Jewish women have, throughout the ages, been greater than Jewish men.

Delay Must Be Watchword

Delay and more delay must be the watchword of Jewish diplomacy.

A year from now, or even six months from now a changed world situation may mean a changed status for the Jewish position in Palestine. A month before the Balfour Declaration, even the most optimistic, still said "the next year in Jerusalem" with the same wishful thinking as had their predecessors for two thousand years. What tomorrow holds for the Jew, only tomorrow knows. But tomorrow can do no worse than the present contemplated "rape of Palestine".

Comments On Current Topics

Chaim Weizmann Flays Britain In Speech To World Jewish Congress.—And now—a question. To this day it is incomprehensible to me why the Palestine Administration should have acted as they did. Some say they were hostile to the Jews. I do not think they were either hostile, or friendly. That disturbances should continue for six months involves greater injury to the British than to the Jews. We are inured to such things through the ages. We have a capacity for withstanding them. But how could England, how could her pro-consuls tolerate such a challenge to the organized power of the British Empire on the part of a handful of men? I cannot understand it, and England owes an answer to herself, as well as to us. (Applause.) Perhaps I should say once more—things are not done in England, they occur. And so it happened that for six months Jenin and Nablus, and Generalissimo Kawkji called check to British power. But a more convincing explanation is required.

Then London decided to dispatch an Expeditionary Force to Palestine. This consisted of a considerable part of the British Army, which is not large. It came, it saw, and it did nothing—it was not allowed to do anything. The prestige of the England, which is dear to all of us, was endangered by the Palestine Administration. But for the comings and goings of this Expeditionary Force, we had to foot the bill. The six million surplus in the Palestinian Treasury, of which we had been proud, and out of which we had hoped that some crumbs might fall to us, is melting away.

Next came the Royal Commission. Its members were serious men, honestly intent on probing their subject. They were completely unbiased, but coming as they did into this atmosphere of hesitation and weakness, they were bound to suppose that the disturbances were the expression of a deep and widely ramified movement. Transjordan, Syria, Irak, India, the entire Near and Middle East seethe with excitement over Palestine—such ideas must have crossed the minds of the Commissioners. I don't know what they were told, I am ignorant of the evidence given by the officials, but one may surmise that to excuse their own inactivity, they must have alleged forces to have been at work far greater than appeared on the surface. It is certainly a mistake to under-rate your opponent, but equally so to over-rate him. I suspect the Administration of having done its best to over-rate him. The burden of my own evidence was that things in Palestine should never have been allowed to reach that pass. Never—never—never. And I cannot imagine that such a state of affairs would have been tolerated in any other part of the British Empire. But when I said this, not once, but ten times, with all my strength, out of all the bitterness in my heart, the answer was: Maybe, but things are as they are.

Freedom Of The Press

A Pledge And An Appreciation
To The Editor:

The wheels of time bring us now into the year 5698 of the Hebrew calendar.

The wheels of time have ground incessantly, and alas, mercilessly, upon the Jew, the most tragic figure in the world today.

As we extend to each other, to our friends and neighbors, the time honored felicitations of the Jewish New Year, it behooves us to recall that the Book of Life has been kept open for considerable numbers of our fellow Jews only because of the opportunities that were made available to them to find refuge and a new home through emigration from lands of oppression to more hospitable shores. 5697 is the closing year in a decade of HIAS-ICA's service to half a million men, women and children who opened a new page in their lives after they had been enabled to emigrate from Eastern and Central Europe.

The march of these troublesome times, with their unprecedented pressure on and persecution of Jews, is accompanied by an increasingly urgent need to aid larger numbers of Jewish emigrants. Extending its greetings to the Jewish communities in the United States, and expressing to them its appreciation of their generous support, HIAS pledges its ceaseless efforts to continue and extend the most urgent and humanitarian endeavors in behalf of the Jewish wanderer in this hour of distress.

Rosh Hashonah

Notice Prepared by the Tract Commission of the Central Conference of American Rabbis and Union of American Hebrew Congregations Merchant Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

Ushering is the Jewish year, 5698, the blowing of the ram's horn in synagogues throughout the world Monday, September 6, will call adherents of Judaism to reflection and repentance. Religious services on two days for Orthodox Jews and on one day for Liberal synagogues will be held in observance of this New Year holiday, known in Hebrew as Rosh Hashanah.

Since the Hebrew day is reckoned from sunset to sunset, the holiday begins this year on Sunday evening, September 5. Rosh Hashanah literally means, "the beginning of the year" and marks the start of the season known in Jewish tradition as the Ten Days of Penitence.

During this season, Jews are reminded that all mankind passes in judgment before its Creator, and are called upon to judge themselves, repent, and go forth with new resolve for righteous action in the year which faces them. The ten days of penitence find their climax in Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement and the season as a whole is the most important in the Jewish religious calendar.

The traditional greeting for this holiday is "May you be inscribed for a good year." This form of address goes back to a poetic thought of the deity as writing in a huge ledger the various fortunes assigned to each of His children.

Jewish legend declares that the world was created on the first day of Tishri. Thus Rosh Hashanah is referred to in the Orthodox prayer book as "the birthday of the world." The day's background is therefore one of universalism and not of particularism.

Swan Song

This is my last column, and naturally, it is with some regret that I realize my close connection with the Indianapolis Jewish community is to be severed. It is only through knowing our fellow citizens, that one begins to appreciate them and to find that they are exceptionally cooperative.

I've always tried to obtain the news and present it in a way which would prove interesting to the readers, and yet not "step on anyone's toes." Often what is entertaining to many may be distastefully embarrassing to one, and for this reason, I have deemed it wise many times to forego a "scoop", rather than offend someone. Also I have wished that my close association with so many of our Jews could be shared by others, so that they, too, might learn what a fine group we have. Now that I am leaving for Bloomington, to resume my education, I find that I am somewhat reluctant to give up being "in the know." There is a fascination about helping to form the news, but still more important is the deep understanding and tolerance that one gains by dealing with the key figures in the various organizations. I feel grateful for my opportunity to work with them, and it is with all sincerity that I wish everyone a very happy New Year.

The Inquiring Reporter

Question:
Do you believe that the coming year will be happier for the Jews than the past year?

Answers:
Edward P. Cohn.

The new year, 5698 is upon us, and will it be happier for the Jews or will it be another of sorrow and trouble? This question cannot be answered by mere mortal, but is one to be answered in time by the Supreme One above. But as Jews, we may each and everyone strive to make our people respected rather than looked down upon. Let us endeavor each day to look for the good we may do, and teach our neighbors tolerance by example, to be tolerant of our fellow Jews. Let us live so that our actions reflect credit upon all Jews, rather than bring discredit upon all. Let us remember to be Jews in every precept that our covenant teaches, and then, possibly, we may live individually and as a race with less fear in our minds, and more happiness in our hearts.

Max Farb.
The same problems facing our Jews throughout the world with its misery, suffering, and heartaches have not been eradicated, and will confront us once again this year. It is my hope and opinion that we are now well on our way to better, saner, and more normal times, and, as in the darkness of our Jewish lives emerges that bright ray of sunshine, we shall indeed have cause to celebrate the year 5698.

Dr. Evelyn Berger.
Personally, I feel that things will not be worse providing we all cooperate. Lack of cooperation causes a great deal of unhappiness, and I think the leaders should try harder to weld our people together. Because those who are unorganized are the first to complain when something goes wrong, I believe it would be wiser if these people joined some organization, and then were able to learn fully what causes disturbances. It is the duty of all Jews to avail themselves of the opportunity to unite their own people.

Irving Ruben.

I believe the next year will be worse because conditions in Europe are becoming more acute, and are about to burst into a flame of disaster. The Jews for centuries have been the goat of all nationalities, and whenever trouble arises, they receive the blame. Political issues are becoming more bitter each day, Jews are more and more active in politics. If they make mistakes, and it is only natural that they do make mistakes, the Gentiles will be the first to condemn. I believe that we should strive for peace and good will, rather than stir up any major issues.

Rabbi Charry Urges "Better Day For All Men"

By RABBI ELIAS CHARRY

Religious truths are timeless—eternal. That is a virtue but also can become a fault. We tend to ignore eternal things in our mad rush to live a moment-to-moment existence. To counter-act this possible fault, religious truths must always be made timely.

The rabbis and teachers of old understood this. They knew how to apply eternal truths to fit temporary circumstances; and because we, as Jews, have always had this ability, our religion never grew stale and always retained its vitality. Religion always kept abreast of the times, applying its eternal truths to ever-changing situations. The Talmud, that vast spiritual literature, is the story of this innate Jewish religious ability to re-apply great truths. In our own day we need desperately to re-capture this ability.

The High Holy Days and their message is a case in point. Half of that message we have preserved. We associate these days with fasting, prayer and repentance—so that each of us may become renewed, regenerated. Uppermost in our minds is the idea of individual salvation. We have, however, sadly neglected the other half of the message. Central to the theme of Rosh Hashonah is the idea of social rebirth—making all of society conform more closely to the "Malchut Mashayam," the kingdom of God on earth.

It is the function of religion to arouse man to eradicate the ills of society—exploitation, hatred, injustice, etc. Ultimately how can we expect man to be moral in an immoral society? How can the individual man be honest, just and decent in the kind of world that still rewards personal greed, deadly competition and group hatreds? Especially today when man has learned to control physical nature and we have a vision of a world of plenty for everyone, certainly we ought to be able to destroy the ills that haunt mankind.

That is the message of Rosh Hashonah that cries out for a new expression in our own times. Let us take cognizance of the great religious truth that brings us to the synagogue during these High Holy Days. If we are true to our Judaism, to our religious principles, we shall set about with hope and courage to re-make society. Let us join the ranks of those whose proud slogan is "the creation of a better day for all men".

After Eltes, in a coronation message of congratulations, had told the King how hard it was to make a living here, the British Consulate advised the hairdresser that by royal order a visa had been granted him.

In his message Eltes promised to become a useful subject of His Majesty in England.

5697 One Of Best In History For Indianapolis

The Indianapolis Jewish Community enjoyed one of its most active years in history, and from the standpoint of honors and achievements, one of its most distinguished, during 5697, a survey shows.

The holding of the national conventions of the four Jewish social workers groups here was one of the most significant events of the year. Allen P. Bloom, head of Kirshbaum Center, presided over the convention of Jewish Center Executives as president, having been elected to that office last year. A second honor came to Mr. Bloom shortly afterwards when he was named to head the Indianapolis Social Workers.

When Rabbi Milton Steinberg returned to Indianapolis after an absence of four years, the Indianapolis Jewish community observed one of its high moments of the year. Rabbi Steinberg spoke at the Kirshbaum Open Forum, and the following day addressed the Jubilee Luncheon of the Indianapolis chapter of Hadassah.

The third biggest event of the year was news of Louis J. Borinstein's probable succession as head of International B'nai B'rith. His elevation to this highest office in the Jewish World rests, of course, upon two factors—Alfred M. Cohen's refusal to stand for re-election, and the vote at the Supreme Grand Lodge Convention next year. It is generally believed, however, that Mr. Borinstein will be a unanimous choice.

The events of the year in chronological arrangement follow:

September

The first social event of the new year found the Buddies Club holding their annual Yom Kippur night affair at the Antler's Hotel.

The city's largest Jewish organizations announced plans for the ensuing year, with B'nai B'rith, and the Jewish Juniors naming important committees. The J. C. C. A. made public its forum program, which included Edgar Ansel Mowrer, Dr. Samuel Schmalhausen, Herbert Agar, Erskine Caldwell, Isaac Marcossan, and Rabbi Milton Steinberg.

October

The Indianapolis Section, National Council of Jewish Women opened the year Oct. 5 with a program including a rendition of a group of costumed songs by Kay Powell, singing actress. Friday afternoon, Oct. 9, the Sisterhood of the Indianapolis Hebrew Congregation got under way with a bingo party at Block's. Headed by Dr. Harry A. Jacobs and Allen Bloom, fourteen Jewish leaders of the city journeyed to Dayton to attend the meeting, Oct. 4 of the East Central States Conference of the Council of Jewish Federation and Welfare Funds.

Daniel Frisch was elected president of the Indianapolis Zionist District at a meeting in Beth El Oct. 4. Senator Jacob Weiss was named vice-president at the same time.

Samuel P. Moise, Gary, was named president of the Indiana-Kentucky State Association of B'nai B'rith at a meeting in Gary Oct. 11, succeeding Samuel J. Mantel of Indianapolis. Sidney Kusworm of Dayton, O., was principal speaker at the installation banquet.

The Senior Hadassah opens the season with a meeting Oct. 28, at which Mrs. Harry Berkman, president of the Mid West Region of Hadassah, of Chicago, is principal speaker.

Using as his subject, "The Present Crisis in Jewish Life", Dr. Abraham L. Sachar, head of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundations, opens a series of three lectures Oct. 29 in Kirshbaum Center.

November

Louis Sakowitz is named president of Beth El Congregation at a meeting in the synagogue Nov. 9.

The Federation of Jewish Women's Clubs hear Dr. J. Raymond Schufz, renowned sociologist and lecturer at the annual peace meeting Nov. 11 in Kirshbaum Center.

Rabbi Edward L. Israel of Baltimore, addresses the Beth El Men's Club.

The Beth El Thanksgiving Dinner-dance at the Claypool is a large success.

December

Samuel Mueller is named president of the Jewish Welfare Fund. The Senior-Junior Hadassah meeting is held Dec. 20 in Kirshbaum Center.

Memorial services are held at the joint Junior-Hadassah meeting, Dec. 20, for Mrs. Ella R. Feibleman, who died after a long illness. The Thrift Shop was closed Saturday as a gesture of respect.

Beth El Men's Club holds its Father and Son night Dec. 30 in the synagogue.

A. Z. A. re-elects David Tavel as Aleph Godol, and almost the entire slate.

The Indianapolis Hebrew Congregation celebrates its eightieth anniversary with a dinner-dance at the Columbia Club, Dec. 29.

January

Jackiel W. Joseph is reappointed president of the park board for another four years by Mayor John W. Kern, after commending the prominent Civic leader for his work for the community.

George J. Michaels is named commander of the Indianapolis Post, No. 114, of the Jewish War Veterans.

The Council of Jewish Women celebrates the forty-fourth anniversary of the founding of the national organization with a birthday meeting at Kirshbaum Center. The meeting also marks the thirty-third year of the Indianapolis Section.

Rabbi Morris M. Feuerlicht reads the scriptural portion at the invocation of Clifford M. Townsend as Governor of Indiana. This is the second time that Dr. Feuerlicht has been so honored. At the invocation of Governor Paul V. McNutt, Dr. Feuerlicht read the same service.

The local B'nai B'rith re-elected Richard P. Efrogmson as president, and the entire slate for another term.

Mayor Kern reappoints Louis J. Borinstein for a four-year term as a member of the City Plan Commission.

Two noted Jews speak in the city this week. Marvin Lowenthal, author and lecturer, appears at Kirshbaum, Jan. 17, under the auspices of the Jewish Welfare Fund, and Dr. Mordecai M. Kaplan addresses the Beth El Men's Club, Jan. 20.

The Council of Jewish Juniors commemorates its twenty-fifth birthday with a ball in the Travertine Room of the Lincoln Hotel.

Rabbi Feuerlicht is guest speaker at the thirty-first anniversary banquet of the United Hebrew Congregation, Jan. 31, at the synagogue.

GREENS COMMITTEES: Be on the lookout for a tall, dark man. Peters has gone away on vacation. When last seen was headed north—This man is dangerous. He is armed with a golf bag. Believed to be traveling toward Maine. Is more likely to shoot a Republican than par. So how do you write a column? He said you just "bat it out." Well let's see. Hmmm.

TOURISTS: Nazi statisticians are blaming the latest upward leap of the death rate in Germany on bad weather and flu epidemic. The mortality curve in the Reich for the first six months this year pointed even more sharply heavenward than during the first half of 1936. and in that period 702 people died in the big cities out of every 100,000 population. as against 638 in the "non-Aryan" year 1932 B. H. (before Hitler). Now the bony fellow with the big scythe is cutting down Hitler's Happy Heilers at a rate of 730 a year per 100,000 in the cities. The weather has been about the same as usual in other European countries and the flu hasn't caused any such notable increase in mortality rates. the Germans alone among nations, under the benefits of Nazi rule, are dying off so much faster than a few years ago. If Schoene Adolf doesn't want to run short of cannon fodder in that glorious next war which he and his cohorts seem to be promoting diligently, they'd better do something about this quick. Adolf could call back into circulation all the Jewish physicians now barred from ministering to Aryans. Perhaps the taboo against them had something to do with the rising death rate in the first place.

SPORTS EDITORS: Next time you send the boys to cover training camps on a fight story, tell them to get out a little earlier in the morning. Besides benefiting their health, this practice might fetch them a good yarn now and then. Like the one everybody missed at Long Branch, New Jersey, where Tommy Farr trained for the Louis fight. You remember the feud between Farr and Max Addled-a-bit Baer that gave the correspondents' typewriters something to chew on for a week before the fight. Baer climbed into the training camp ring to take a bow and Farr rushed at him with a cave-man's scowl and both fists swinging. had to be forcibly restrained, he did. It was all due to some deep, dark secret grudge. Well, that was what the newspaper boys saw in the afternoon. but if they had dragged themselves into the open around 7 in the morning as does one of the J. T. A. staff who commutes from Elberon. they might have encountered the edifying spectacle of Farr jogging along Norwood Avenue on his training grind. and who jogging with him but Bad Boy Baer. neither of the two great brutes raising so much as a little pinkie-winkie to the other. restored the J. T. A. man's faith in the peaceable instincts of humanity, that did.

INCOME TAX BUREAU: That formerly wealthy New York physician who spent many thousands furthering his daughter's stage ambitions. succeeding so well that the gal is now one of the most famous flicker stars in the whole galaxy. then quietly went broke and not long ago was discovered living in abject poverty. is now rolling in luxury on $50 a week supplied by daughter out of her weekly pay check of several thousands.

SHIP NEWS PHOTOGS: When the Berengaria comes up New York Bay this week be sure to try and get a shot of Felix M. Warburg, the banker, and David Ben-Gurion, Palestine Zionist labor leader, shaking hands. Mr. Warburg, you know, led the non-Zionists in their scrap with the Zionists at the meeting of the Jewish Agency for Palestine. and when he won two additional memberships on the Agency Executive for his side, Ben-Gurion threatened to quit. Maybe the companionship of a sea voyage has brought them closer together. in a truce that would make Jewish history. and Mr. Warburg will pose slapping Dave on the back and saying something like "Shalom tapuach adamah zakan".... which is Hebrew for "Hello, you old potato".....

MISH-MASH: The hero of Rion Bercovici's first novel, just out, dealing with the space-grabbing racket, is Ben Sonnenberg, one of the fellows who will make you famous if you pay him enough. Herchel Bernardi, 13, may turn out to be the Yiddish Freddi Bartholomew. He's featured in "Green Fields" (Gruene Felder), first Yiddish flicker made by Collective Film Producers, Inc. Hershel already has a big reputation along Second Avenue, where he is a veteran legit performer. The man bit the dog again. We mean, since that Long Island truck-driver named Murphy changed his name to Levy, a Pittsburgh citizen named Herbert Smith agreed to alter his monicker to Abraham. He signed an agreement to that effect with his fiancé, Rachel Hakheizer. and further agreed to enter the Jewish faith.

Value Of Anglo-Jewish Press Is Told At Institute Session

By Conference of Jews, Christians
WILLIAMSBURG, Mass.—

"The religious press enjoys a unique freedom and independence of the yoke that commercialism and popular whim lay upon the neck of the secular publication," Father John Lafarge, S. J., Associate Editor of America, a Catholic weekly, declared at the Institute of Human Relations.

The second speaker, Dr. Alexander Brin, editor of the Boston Jewish Advocate, referred to the Jewish press as a seismograph, registering the heartbeats of world-wide Jewish thought.

"In this age," said Dr. Brin, "a creditable Jewish paper is as vital as affiliation with the synagogue, or the lodge or the women's club. It is essential and precedent to these, for it fosters and works with them."

New Names In News Of Year

By ROMAN SLOBODIN
By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

NAMES, in accordance with their traditional function, made news in the hectic year 1936-1937, but at the same time events brought into the limelight of Jewish history some names little known to the headlines before.

As far as the Jews were concerned, the year's greatest outpouring of printer's ink was occasioned by a plump, bespectacled, quick-tempered, socially-progressive little man, half Jewish by birth, a public personage and maker of divers kinds of news for many years—Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York City.

On the other hand, the runner-up in point of public interest in matters pertaining to Jews was an English aristocrat whose previous publicity was limited—Earl Peel, chairman of the British Royal Commission for Palestine.

Most of the top headlines appeared in their traditional roles, and the things they said and did, important, significant, laudable, detestable or funny, were just about what might have been expected. There was one notable exception—the Reverend Dr. Charles S. McFarland, general secretary emeritus of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, took back all the good things he had to say for Adolf Hitler a few years ago.

Here are some of the new names in Jewish affairs of the year:

FIIORELLO H. LAGUARDIA
MRS. STEPHEN S. WISE
EARL PEEL
DR. CHAIM WEIZMANN
VISCOUNT SAMUEL
REV. DR. CHARLES S. MACFARLAND
ARTURO HOSCANINI
GEORGE CARDINAL MUNDELEIN
GRAND MUFTI HAJ AMIN EL HUSSENI

MAYOR FIORELLO H. LAGUARDIA of New York City, whose career is sufficiently well-known to American readers, again brought himself forcibly to the attention of German Nazis when he suggested that a statue of "that brown-shirted fanatic who is now menacing the peace of the world" be included in a "chamber of horrors" at the New York World's Fair in 1939.

The Mayor made his proposal at a luncheon of the women's division of the American Jewish Congress, March 3. The German press recognized the description of ADOLF HITLER and retaliated with apologetic fury, calling the Mayor names ranging from "filthy Jew" down. The German Government demanded an apology, and Secretary of State CORDELL HULL voiced the United States Govern-

Many Problems Facing Jewish Women Of U. S., Mrs. Brin Says

By MRS. ARTHUR BRIN
President National Council of Jewish Women

Special The American women are the best organized of any women in the world. Consciously or unconsciously, the organized life of American women is an expression of their idealism and their faith that the good life should be and can be within the reach of all.

It is the same idealism which led the Jewish women forty-five years ago to band together in their first national organization, the National Council of Jewish Women. The need of developing programs of social service, of Jewish education, of aid to migrant women and girls quickly brought together the Jewish women of this country and Canada.

Today these needs have multiplied a hundred-fold. There is more than ever to be done for migrants, refugees, and aliens; more need of understanding the aims and direction of Jewish life; more need to seek a fuller integration with American life to further the general social welfare through progressive legislation; to safeguard the institutions of democracy; to combat a militarism that seems to be leading us to the final disaster.

Everywhere Jewish women, including the recent college graduates, realize that in all this there is a call to service which they must answer, and there has been a significant increase in the number of women who have joined the ranks of the National Council of Jewish Women whose program bears on these issues.

The lowliest Jew in the most remote corner of the land understands that we are living in a period which is historic as an era of migration and that from this exodus arises a sequence of problems which reach into the daily lives of all of us.

This is not only an age of migrations and a search by thousands for new homes. It is an age when liberties and opportunities achieved in past generations are in jeopardy. Strange new theories that lead back to a tribal civilization are being indoctrinated into the minds of old and young in Germany and other lands. Democracy, tolerance, liberties such as we enjoy, peace—cannot exist where these racial and political theories gain a foothold. And the problem may become even more acute for our children than it is for us.

It is most important, therefore, that those who by training and education are fitted to cope with these problems should do so. Everywhere we need to develop leadership. We need to use every opinion-making agency at our disposal to help build up an informed and understanding public. Certainly women, many of whom are well-trained and have ample leisure, must accept their share in a task ment's regrets.

MRS. STEPHEN S. WISE, president of the organization before which Mr. LaGuardia made his original remarks, appealed to Mr. Hull to demand apologies from Germany for the press campaign of vilification of America, which had included reference to the Mayor's audience as "women from the streets." Mr. Hull made representations to Germany, bringing expressions of regret even milder and less formal than those on the part of the United States.

The fame of Mrs. Wise's illustrious rabbi husband has not stopped this big-eyed little woman from having an independent career of her own as an artist and communal worker. Born Louise Waterman, in New York City, she studied at the Art Students League, held exhibitions in New York, Philadel-so close to them. The responsibility becomes particularly grave because, due to the situation abroad, the centre of gravity of world Jewry has shifted westward and Anglo-American Jewry has taken on a new importance.

If in these critical times the Jewish women of America will join in the effort to create an understanding Jewry able to deal with the network of problems peculiar to our times, they can make a real contribution. The groups for study and action of the National Council of Jewish Women on peace, legislation, Jewish education, current Jewish problems, give the Jewish women of the United States and Canada an opportunity to prepare themselves for this task and to pool their energies towards this end.

On the eve of our solemn holy days of the New Year, the National Council of Jewish Women appeals to all Jewish women to add their strength to ours that we may make such a contribution.

U.S. Envoy To Go To Nazi Meeting

BERLIN — Charge d'Affaires Prentiss B. Gilbert of the United States Embassy, will be among foreign diplomats who will set precedents by attending the Nazi Party's forthcoming Nuremberg congress, it was learned. While most of the foreign envoys will be represented, it was understood the Soviet Embassy would withhold its participation.

(A dispatch to the New York Times attributed the diplomats' changed stand to the efforts of Neville Henderson, New British Ambassador to Germany.)

Mosleyites In Visit To Nazis

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
BERLIN—A delegation of twenty followers of Oswald Mosley, British Fascist, recently visited Julius Streicher, publisher of the leading anti-Semitic paper of Germany, Der Stuermer, at Nuremberg.

Streicher urged the Mosleyites to stand firm in "the world-wide battle against the world enemy—the Jews," and the leader of the delegation, named Benet, replied: "We are happy to have seen and heard the world fuhrer against Judaism, from whose organ, the Stuermer, we receive our best weapons for our struggle in England."

phia and Washington. Among her notable paintings are: Crucifixion, Orphanage, Flight from Belgium, Sacrifice of Abraham, and portraits of Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst and Claude G. Montefiore. She founded the Free Visiting Nurse Association of Portland, Ore., and the Child Adoption Committee of the Free Synagogue. She married Dr. Wise in 1900. Their two children, James Waterman Wise and New York City Magistrate Justine Wise Tulin, are also prominent citizens in their own right.

PEEL is a signature that was assured during the year of a place in history, standing as it did at the foot of the monumental report of the British Royal Commission on Palestine, recommending tripartition of the Holy Land.

EDWARD VIII, short-reigned King of England, commissioned his "Right Trusty and Right Well-beloved Cousin and Counsellor, WILLIAM ROBERT WELLESLEY, EARL PEEL, Knight Grand Commander of Our Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, Knight Grand Cross of Our Most Excellent Order of the British Empire," with five other well-beloved and right honorable gentlemen, to find out what was wrong in Palestine, and how to fix it, if possible.

Working under difficult conditions, surrounded by rancor and bloody events, the noble Earl and his colleagues did what even a hostile observer would have to admit was a masterly job of reporting. Speculation as to who actually wrote the report may be unjust as the Earl is an old newspaperman himself. He covered the Graeco-Turkish War in 1897 for the London Daily Telegraph. At that time he was merely the oldest son of the first Viscount Peel, an Oxford graduate and a lawyer (called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1893). He was thirty then, is seventy now.

CHAIM WEIZMANN was the center of some speculation as the year drew to a close, to the effect that he may be the first head of an independent Jewish State in modern history. The president of the Jewish Agency for Palestine and of the World Zionist Organization has certainly been for many years the symbol of independent political aspirations among the Jews.

LEON BLUM, of course, kept newspaper editors busier during the year than any other member of the Jewish people, but the dispatches about him were only incidentally of Jewish interest. His year at the head of the French Government was marked, however, by several anti-Semitic demonstrations by reactionary political elements, including a terrific free-for-all in the Chamber of Deputies, November 13, which started when a Rightist Deputy called the Premier a "dirty Jew."

Out of each such incident M. Blum emerged with increased rather than diminished prestige, because of his level-headedness and cool temper. Though he stepped down from premiership to vice-premiership on June 22, he remained probably the most powerful individual political leader in France, and still the sparkplug of the Popular Front Government. He wrote an article published in America last year, declaring French Jews were good patriots, remarking that he himself was indistinguishable from his non-Jewish fellow citizens in features, speaking accent, education or love of country. Another of Blum's writings that caused a stir was "Marriage," a book he wrote many years ago, in which he recommended sexual experience for young people before marriage, which was reprinted in translation in the United States during the Spring. M. Blum himself has been happily-married for many years.

New Year Greetings

HERBERT LOUIS SAMUEL was elevated to the British peerage as Viscount Samuel of Mount Carmel and Texteth in the coronation honors list of GEORGE VI. The first part of the title is reminiscent of Viscount Samuel's service as first British High Commissioner for Palestine. Mount Carmel is a pleasant suburb of the city of Haifa. Texteth is in Liverpool, where Viscount Samuel was born. The new Jewish peer automatically became a member of the House of Lords. His maiden speech there was delivered two months later during the debate on partition of Palestine. He offered a substitute plan—establishment of a confederation of Arab States, including Palestine, with the Jews as an autonomous minority. The proposal brought down a storm of Zionist wrath upon the Viscount.

THE REVEREND DR. CHARLES STEDMAN MACFARLAND, general secretary emeritus of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, remained silent in his retirement for four years, watching Adolf Hitler break the promises personally made to him in 1933—that racial and religious intolerance would be only a passing phase of the German revolution, that freedom of faith and conscience would be re-established. Hitler had asked Dr. MacFarland for four years to prove his good faith. Dr. MacFarland wrote a book urging the world to give Hitler a chance. When the time was up, the clergyman spoke out, and his voice was clear and strong despite his 71 years. He wrote to Hitler on June 2 declaring "you have violated every assurance you made to me," decrying the Nazi teaching of "hate—hate—hate," the Nazi acts of oppression and treachery.

ARTURO TOSCANINI was one Italian whose attitude toward his fellow-men and lack of racial bias was not affected by the rapprochement during the year between Mussolini and Hitler. The great orchestra conductor's triumphal visit to Palestine last December, where he held the Palestine Symphony Orchestra, in its debut concert, was a high point in the history of the Jewish homeland. His refusal to allow his concerts at the Salzburg Music Festival this summer to be broadcast by the official German radio, a leading medium of anti-Semitic propaganda, resulted in a Nazi ban on participation of German opera stars in the festival.

PAOLO ORANO, rector of Perugia University in Italy and a deputy in the Italian Parliament, published a book during the year which was the first notable sign of anti-Semitism in that country which, though not of great proportions, caused concern. Dr. Orano's argument was directed against Zionism, which he held to be unpatriotic, pro-British and out of harmony with Italy's imperial interests. It caused consternation among Italian Jewry, unaccustomed to anti-Semitic attacks, and it was followed by scattered pronouncements in the Government.

Irish Jewish Leader Lauds Emerald Isles

By ROMAN SLOBODIN

NEW YORK—Irrelend and particularly Norrthern Irrelend, after the partition—is as fine a place as there is in the world for any man, and that includes the Jews, take the word of John Ross, president of the Belfast Jewish Community.

Mr. Ross, sixty, sturdy and snub-nosed, arrived last week aboard the Queen Mary, with a cheery manner, a vast enthusiasm for the Jewish State in Palestine and a soft Scotch-Irish burr as broad as the promenade deck, that even crept into an occasional Hebrew word.

A resident of Belfast since 1906, and former rabbi of its synagogue, (his successor was Dr. Isaac Herzog, now chief rabbi of Palestine), Mr. Ross came here to visit a son and daughter living in New York.

"The one spot in the whole world where the Jews are treated with all kindness is Northern Ireland," Mr. Ross said. "That's not to say that the Jews in the Irish Free State aren't treated well, either. President de Valera is a staunch friend of the Jews. His father was Jewish."

"The Governor General of Northern Ireland, the Duke of Abercorn, and the Prime Minister, Viscount Craigavon, are both good friends to our people. When King George and Queen Elizabeth made their coronation visit to Belfast recently I attended one of the State functions in their honor as official representative of the Jewish Community."

The Belfast Jewish Community was organized seventy years ago by Daniel Joseph Jaffe, descendant of Mordecai Jaffe, codifier of Jewish law, Mr. Ross recounted. Daniel Jaffe's son, Sir Otto Jaffe, who also headed the Jewish Community, was German consul in Belfast and three times Lord Mayor of the city.

"In no part of the world have controlled press to the same general effect."

GEORGE CARDINAL MUNDELEIN, Roman Catholic Archbishop of the Chicago Diocese, stirred up the Nazis to renewed fury just as their blood pressures was returning to normal after Mayor La Guardia's attack on Hitler, by calling the Fuehrer "an Austrian paperhanger and a poor one at that," in a speech May 18. The German Government protested and so did the Paperhangers Union of Philadelphia. The incident brought relations between Germany and the Vatican to the breaking point, particularly when POPE PIUS XI shortly afterward took occasion to praise Cardinal Mundelein highly.

HAI AMIN EL HUSSEINI, Grand Mufti of Palestine, long the Arab lieutenant of the British Administration, spent a large part of the year outside the country, with the public generally understanding he would be arrested if he dared return, for his role in the Arab disorders in 1936. But when Great Britain announced her partition plan the Mufti did return to Jerusalem, he was not arrested, and he was reported to have promptly despatched agitators throughout the land, preaching against partition and against the Jews. His efforts to obtain support of rulers of neighboring Arab States, however, were largely wasted—most of them were too dependent on Britain to oppose her wishes. The Mufti sent a delegation to Geneva to oppose partition and demand the whole of Palestine for Arab rule; his old enemy, RA-GHEB BEY NASHASHIBI had another Arab delegation there to advance his own party's interest.

A. F. Of L. Excuses Members To Observe Rosh Hashonah

SPECIAL CINCINNATI, Ohio—In response to a request from the B'nai B'rith Supreme Lodge, William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor, has issued an official statement excusing Jewish members of trade unions from participation in Labor Day ceremonies, so that those Jewish workers who wish to attend Rosh Hashonah services might be able to do so.

the Jews enjoyed greater tolerance than they've met in Northern Ireland," Mr. Ross reiterated.

All the Jews of Ireland, both in the north and in the Free State, are staunch nationalists, enthusiastic over the prospect of a Jewish State and warm supporters of the action of the World Zionist Congress in Zurich in voting for negotiations with Great Britain on the subject, Mr. Ross declared.

Irish Catholics Hit Persecution.

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
DUBLIN—Jewish persecution in Germany was condemned by the Standard, leading Catholic journal. "The Catholic church condemns unjust persecution wherever it is found," the paper says. "The attitude of the church to Jewish persecution in Germany is evidenced by the decree of the Holy Office in 1928. The church especially condemns the spirit of hatred against them, the people once chosen by the Almighty, which is called anti-Semitism."

Writer Says No Jewish Angle To N. Y. Election

NEW YORK—The highly hypothetical "Jewish vote" was a much-talked-of factor as New York City municipal election campaign gathered momentum this week.

The "Jewish Angle" in the campaign had been discussed in political circles for months, but it was brought strikingly into the open when German-American Nazis, faced with three candidates for Mayor, all of whom had publicly proclaimed their friendship for the Jews, bestowed their indorsement on United States Senator Royal S. Copeland.

The Deutscher Weckruf und Beobachter, weekly newspaper of the pro-Nazi German-American Volksbund, came out for Senator Copeland as "the only alternative of escape" from Mayor LaGuardia and Jeremiah T. Mahoney, both of whom have frequently denounced Adolf Hitler and his regime in Germany.

Rabbi Isaac M. Wapner, editor of Our Way, a Jewish weekly, and a Copeland supporter, declared that the Nazis' action would not alienate Senator Copeland's Jewish supporters, adding the Senator had demonstrated his friendship for the Jews. His statement was made in a letter to Mr. Mahoney questioning the sincerity of his attacks on the Nazis for persecuting Jews.

Copeland Repudiates Nazis
A few days later Dr. Copeland repudiated the Nazi indorsement, declaring if those offering it were "alien followers of alien doctrines, I don't want their support," and that he wanted the votes of "100 per cent Americans" only.

"For me there is no religious issue in this campaign," Senator Copeland said.

Estimates of the racial grouping in the city's electorate are: Jews, 33 per cent; Irish, 22 per cent; German, 18 per cent; Italian, 11 per cent; "Yankee," 10 per cent; and Negro, 4 per cent.

Experienced observers predicted that in the end the "Jewish vote," as usual, would prove to be a very slight factor, if any at all, because the Jews would vote for candidates on the basis of political issues having nothing to do with race. Many Jews looked askance at the raising of the issue, and their feelings were voiced by former General Session Judge Jonah J. Goldstein, who declared that "dragging the religious issue into a political campaign is un-American and nauseating," and that as a Jew he resented use of his race as a "political football."

The Jewish Examiner, New York weekly, warned its readers that "efforts of candidates for the mayoralty of New York City to enlist public support to their cause are hardly under way before the floodgates of malicious whispers are let loose."

All Seek Jewish Favor.
This, however, did not deter the contestants from taking official actions which appeared aimed at gaining the favor of the Jewish populace. Each candidate can point to his salient gesture of friendship to the Jews, to wit: LaGuardia—His denunciation of Hitler last Spring, suggesting a figure of the "brown-shirted fanatic who menaces the peace of the world" in a World's Fair "chamber of horrors."

Mahoney—His determined opposition at the 1935 convention of the Amateur Athletic Union to American participation in the Olympic games in Berlin.

Copeland—His espousal of the cause of the Jewish homeland in Palestine, his visit to Palestine as head of an unofficial Senatorial investigating committee and, more recently, his opposition to the partition of Palestine.
